

INDIGENOUS WAYS & SUSTAINABLE COMMUNITIES

Pando Terra uses indigenous ways to create a sustainable community and 7 holistic elements to create an organic approach to sustainable community development.

It is designed to offer a fluid process where the success of one element will enable success in others. It is about empowering, encouraging, and supporting the community and its members first; positive economic development will follow.

Embraces Change

- Organic fluid process
- Cooperative & Transparent
- Multi-level functionality
- Multi-disciplinary approach
- Continuous Planning Tool

Holistic Elements

- Protection of environment, heritage & culture
- Opportunities for local businesses
- Employment opportunities
- Community infrastructure
- Training & human resource development
- Educational links & transfer of knowledge
- Linking traditions with technology

Empowers People

- Preserves culture, heritage & environment
- Creates opportunities for youth
- Promotes sustainable economic development
- Fosters community health

Manages Development

- Easily updated
- Promotes synergy
- Minimizes duplication of efforts
- Cost-effective
- Used at community, organization & project levels
- Addresses all levels of community development